Unexpectedly good

- Reviews: I arrived around noon in Gora and was looking for things to do. As the options were limited I decided to visit this museum. If I had had more time, I'd probably done something different. However, I was pleasantly surprised by the way the museum is laid out and the artworks positioned in the landscape. If the weather is right and you have a few hours, this is definitely a good option for the whole family. You can find out more at:

Highly recommended stop for Hakone-goers

- Rating: 5

- Reviews: I enjoy but generally don't "love" museums, but this one was definitely an exception. The wide range and diversity of exhibits for all age groups ensured that you were engaged and attentive throughout. It also helps that it's located in a beautiful spot in Hakone, and on a sunny day, it looks amazing with the outdoor displays. You can find out more at:

Omoshiroi!

- Rating: 5

- Reviews: I really loved this open-air museum in Hakone. I think it was the highlight of our trip. If I could go again tomorrow, I would.

Just a lovely walk in autumn and the sculpture collection was diverse and well curated to the outdoor climate. There was a small collection of Henry Moore; to my surprise and wonder being a small town of Hakone.

The Picasso building was also very interesting. Omoshiroi! Picasso's pieces were not typical Picasso. It revealed his more divergent works; mainly ceramics with unusual applications.

Bring good shoes. The pathways are sloped. I did see a wheelchair; but it wasn't easy. You can find out more at:

Great outdoor art space

- Rating: 5

- Reviews: Stopped by here for about an hour. It has some unique and beautiful sculptures and the stained glass tower is magnificent to stand in. While doing the Hakone loop - stop by and spend some time here. It wasn't very crowded compared to everything else. You can find out more at:

Well Worth the Visit.

- Rating: 4

- Reviews: This is a lovely open air museum with many interesting sculptures; the area is beautifully set out over the hills. The museum has some wonderful interactive pieces for children, many were having a ball. The museum has some indoor locations including one devoted to Picasso, which we found fascinating and learned a lot about the man. There is also a Cafe/restaurant. You can find out more at:
